NEW YORK STATE GIVES OVER A MILLION PLURALITY TO SENATOR

COX HOPELESSLY BEATEN IN OHIO

DAYTON, November 2—Governor James M. Cox today sent his congratulations to Senator Warren G. Harding formally admitting his defeat. His message follows:

"In the spirit of Americanism I accept the decision of the majority, sending as a defeated candidate, my congratulations and pledge as a citizen my support to the executive authority in whatever emergency might arise."

NEW YORK, November 3—With definite returns lacking from only a few states Senator Warren G. Harding today has been swept into Presidency by the greatest popular majority in the history of American national politics.

Incomplete returns early today gave Harding 342 electoral votes and Cox 149 with 39 doubtful.

As tabulation of the returns were completed today the Harding landslide was seen to be greater than it had appeared even last night when a great Republican sweep from coast to coast became manifest.

The most optimistic predictions of Republican National Chairman Will H. Hays came true in practically every instance.

The woman's vote swept the totals to unprecedented limits, making the Democratic defeat appear to be more overwhelming.

Harding, when he assumes the Presidency March 4, 1921, will go into office with a Senate and a House of Representatives Republican by a wide margin according to the returns today. The Republicans gained seats in both the upper and lower houses.

In many states the Republican margin of victory reached unheard of pluralities. Estimates were that Harding carried New York by 1,100,000. Other states had record-breaking majorities.

Word from President-elect Harding as to the personnel of his cabinet was anxiously awaited today. There was also great interest in what President Wilson will do or say as the result of the election. Wilson held a "solemn referendum" on the peace treaty.

It was estimated that the total vote cast was more than 20,000,000. Harding received 6,000,000 votes more than Cox, breaking all records for a political landslide.

No state ever has given a Presidential candidate more than a 500,000 plurality. This was surpassed by New York which gave Harding a probable lead of more than 1,100,000 by Pennsylvania where the Republican candidate had a majority of more than 700,000 and in Illinois where Harding's estimated plurality was over 800,000. Harding's majority in Ohio was estimated at 400,000. Other states rolled unprecedented pluralities for Harding. California whose vote four years ago decided the Hughes Wilson contest in favor of the latter appeared to have gone for Harding by more than 400,000.

COX LED IN ONLY 6 OF THE 88 COUNTIES IN STATE OF OHIO

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3 With more than one-half of the vote in, Senator Harding's majority over Governor Cox in his home state was estimated today at near 400,000. The vote in 146 precincts of the 726 showed Harding 52 Cox 356, 91. These returns showed Cox a possible win in the 88 counties. Harry Davis, Republican, lost to Donahy for Governor by at least 100,000.

OUR NEXT PRESIDENT

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
MARION, Ohio, Nov. 3—If Warren

G. Harding, now president-elect of the United States, had only been born in a log cabin—but he wasn't and any truthfully intimate story about him must begin with the bald statement that he was born in a small frame house at Blooming Grove, a village near here, of poor but thrifty parents, his father being a struggling country doctor who rode his own pigs and treated horses as well.

The log cabin story was killed by Harding himself shortly after he was nominated for the presidency and the incident reveals more about the man who is to be the next president of the United States than could be told in a book. It illustrates the absence of any "front" about Harding and his simple sincerity one of the outstanding traits of the man.

Just after the Chicago convention nominated Harding some of his ever-enthusiastic workers started the story that he was born in a log cabin. It was getting a good running start when newspaper correspondents were called into Harding's office at Washington one day and given a short typewritten statement signed by the candidate denying in toto the log cabin story.

"I don't like to spoil a good story for you boys," Harding said in explanation, "but the truth is I wasn't born in a log cabin at all. I wish I had been but alas it was only a frame house."

But there is a good story in Harding's spectacular rise anyway. Born in the obscurity of a struggling village in central Ohio exactly fifty-five years ago yesterday Harding, doing business on a shoestring most of the time has now reached the pinnacle to which only twenty-eight other men in the entire history of this nation have climbed.

It will be difficult for anyone to really believe that the man and woman whose names are on millions of lips today are just plain ordinary middle western Americans who have spent their lives in a small town struggling for a place among the substantial citizens of the locality.

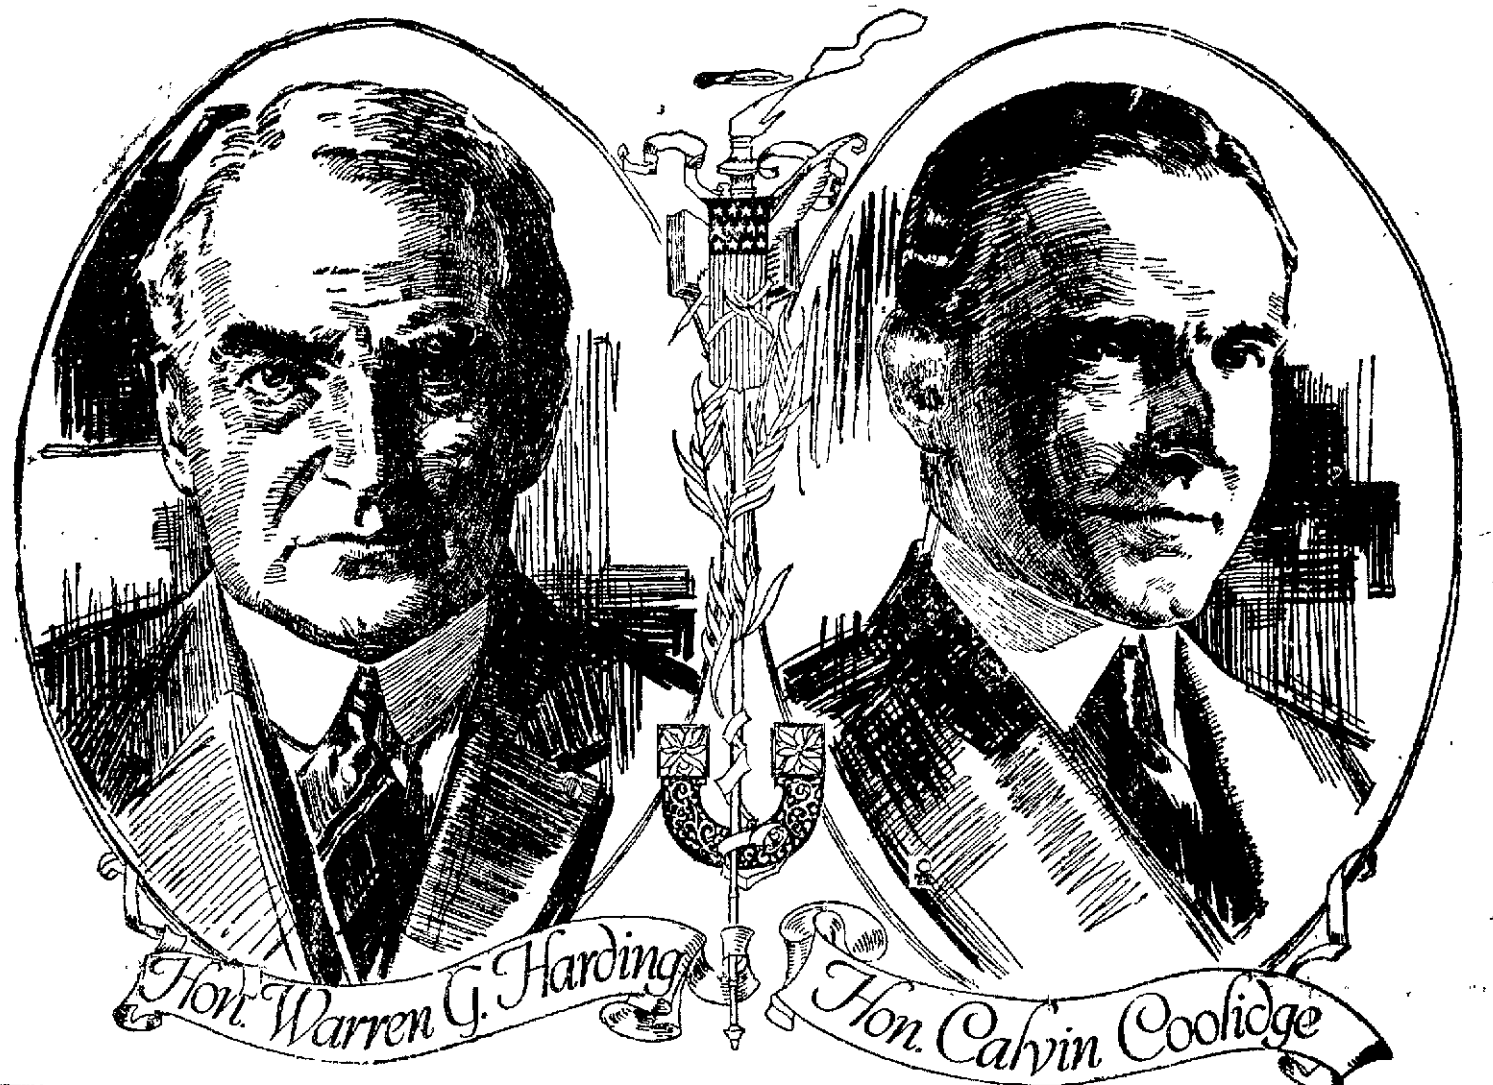

Nevertheless they are the people novelists seek to describe as the typical Americans prosperous in a small way, intelligent and fairly well educated though not so well read perhaps knowing a little about many commonplace matters, extremely hospitable and generous severely conventional, regular attendants at church and lodge meetings, fond of fried chicken and of sitting in rocking chairs on the front porch afterward.

There you have the Hardings.

They haven't changed much with the good fortune that has recently come to them. It is true that Mrs. Harding used to work in her own kitchen and that now they have a cook, but her husband still has his clothes darned to make them wear longer, he shaves himself with an old fashioned razor, his shirt cuffs are turned when they get frayed on one side, and Mrs. Harding herself wears a hat clear through the season and sometimes longer for she was wearing her last summer straw hat in October this year.

The Hardings live in a big green house with a large white front porch on Mount Vernon avenue, a quiet street here. It is a good street but not in the most exclusive section of Marion, of a town of that name.

Boys, We Thank You

The great and solemn referendum has been had and indeed it was solemn. Republicans had an abundance of faith in the success of their ticket but it was not an enthusiastic faith or one based on the mere fact of dissatisfaction with the Democratic administration. It was rather a faith in their leader Mr. Harding, and a belief that the United States could best progress under the same national policy which has given it its position as a world power in less than a century.

We cannot believe that the millions of Americans who voted did not give serious and earnest consideration to the league issue. It was more thoroughly discussed than any of the other campaign issues and more widely advertised than any campaign issue in the history of the country. It cannot be said that the Republican press minimized the league issue. From the time Mr. Wilson brought the covenant home with him until the day of election the league discussion pro and con filled the front pages of newspapers and a very large percentage of the strong Republican newspapers supported it with all their force and vigor. Even the Republican party itself was on a fair way to being split on the league and there are yet millions of Republicans who are for the league provided the necessary reservations can be made to it.

Early returns indicate an overwhelming majority for Mr. Harding and this in spite of the fact that both Mr. Cox and Mr. Wilson declared the sole issue to be the league of nations. In view of this result the bitter enders can take it that the people do not want the league, with or without trimmings or shavings. The bitter enders who are re-elected will no doubt take this view.

To our mind the league was the sole issue only because Mr. Wilson insisted that it should be. There were domestic issues which were much closer to the hearts of the average man or woman who believe that we can take care of our international troubles as we meet them but that we are now face to face with domestic difficulties which ought to be taken care of at once. We need not discuss those issues here.

The people in electing a Republican Senate have put the league matter in their hands with full power to act or not to act. So far as Mr. Harding is concerned we expect that he will turn his statement to other matters and not attempt to force his ideas on the Senate. He has indicated all along that his acts would be in harmony with the senate.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Advice of This Clearfield Progress is of Certain Value

Many a woman's back has aches and pains.

Often it's the kidneys' fault. That's why Dean's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Ask your neighbor? Many Clearfield women know this. Read what one has to say about it: Mrs. Paul Kline, 326 Sixth avenue, Clearfield, says: "My back ached and troubled all the time and it was particularly painful for me to bend over. The trouble kept me awake at night and I got some at A. M. Thatcher's Drug store. Three boxes entirely removed the trouble and at that time, my back and kidneys were no annoyance."

Boys, We Thank You

The great and solemn referendum has been had and indeed it was solemn. Republicans had an abundance of faith in the success of their ticket but it was not an enthusiastic faith or one based on the mere fact of dissatisfaction with the Democratic administration. It was rather a faith in their leader Mr. Harding, and a belief that the United States could best progress under the same national policy which has given it its position as a world power in less than a century.

We cannot believe that the millions of Americans who voted did not give serious and earnest consideration to the league issue. It was more thoroughly discussed than any of the other campaign issues and more widely advertised than any campaign issue in the history of the country. It cannot be said that the Republican press minimized the league issue. From the time Mr. Wilson brought the covenant home with him until the day of election the league discussion pro and con filled the front pages of our newspapers and a very large percentage of the strong Republican newspapers supported it with all their force and vigor. Even the Republican party itself was on a fair way to being split on the league and there are yet millions of Republicans who are for the league provided the necessary reservations can be made to it.

Early returns indicate an overwhelming majority for Mr. Harding and this in spite of the fact that both Mr. Cox and Mr. Wilson declared the sole issue to be the league of nations. In view of this result the bitter enders can take it that the people do not want the league, with or without trimmings or shearings. The bitter enders who are re-elected will no doubt take this view.

To our mind the league was the sole issue only because Mr. Wilson insisted that it should be. There were domestic issues which were much closer to the hearts of the average man or woman who believe that we can take care of our international troubles as we meet them but that we are now face to face with domestic difficulties which ought to be taken care of at once. We need not discuss those issues here.

The people in electing a Republican Senate have put the league matter in their hands with full power to act or not to act. So far as Mr. Harding is concerned we expect that he will turn his statement to other matters and not attempt to force his ideas on the Senate. He has indicated all along that his acts would be in harmony with the Senate.

Safety First.
Preparatory to showing Charlie his new sister, his father said, "What do you say to getting a new baby at our house, sonny?" A WOMAN'S BACK

The Advice of This Clearfield Doctor is of Certain Value

Many a woman's back has aches and pains.

Often it's the kidneys' fault. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Ask your neighbor?

Many Clearfield women know this. Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Paul Kline, 326 Sixth avenue, Clearfield says: "My back ached and I was particularly painful for me to bend over. The trouble kept me awake at night and I got some at A. M. Thatcher's Drug store. Three boxes entirely removed the trouble and at that time, my back and kidneys have given me no annoyance."

SAUCES FOR FISH AND MEATS.

The source of average thickness which is the most commonly used. Allows two tablespoons of each of flour and butter with one cupful of liquid, whether milk, stock or tomato.

An appropriate sauce to accompany a dish makes a plain dish out of the ordinary. The cook who serves tasty sauces always has on hand materials for making such sauces as white, brown, tomato and Bechamel, and with these as a foundation is able to make sauces innumerable. For a brown sauce a slightly larger quantity of flour is used to thicken as thickness is lessened by browning the flour, the starch being destroyed. A brown sauce is made by browning the flour and butter well before adding the liquid.

Bechamel Sauce.—Cook one and one-half cups of white stock (which is broth from chicken or a combination of veal and beef) with one slice each of carrot and onion, a bay leaf, six peppercorns and a sprig of parsley, then strain. There should be a cupful. Add one-fourth of a cupful of butter, and one-fourth of a cupful of flour and gradually add the stock and one cupful of milk. Season with salt and pepper.

Tomato Sauce.—Take one-half cup of tomatoes, two tablespoons of sugar, eight peppercorns, a bit of bay leaf, and salt. Cook twenty minutes, rub through a sieve and add one cupful of brown stock and four tablespoons of each of browned flour and butter cooked together. Gradually add the hot liquid. To serve with fish the following is a most pleasing sauce:

Sauce Piquante.—To one cupful of brown sauce add one tablespoonful of vinegar, one-half small chopped onion, one tablespoonful each of chopped capers and pickle with a dash cayenne.

PERCHED ON A HIGH STOOL IN AN OFFICE

Many a Brain is Trying to Work With Weak, Thin Blood

MORE RICH, RED BLOOD NEEDED

Pepto-Mangan Gives You the Health To Tackle Your Daily Work With Vigor

If you sit at a desk all day in an office whether you are perched on a high stool or seated in an upholstered chair, your body is inactive. You can't get much fresh air and outdoor exercise. Your blood becomes poor. You look pale and feel weak.

The great tonic, Pepto-Mangan, is what you need for awhile. It makes rich, red blood. It restores your vital energy. Your color comes back.

When your blood is good, full of red corpuscles, you are better able to resist disease. You go about your daily work with the optimism of good health.

Pepto-Mangan is sold in both liquid and tablet form. Take either kind you prefer. Both have the same medicinal value. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" should be on the package. adv sand could have an exclusive section. There is nothing fancy about the Harding home, inside or out. It is far less pretentious than those of most Marion merchants of citizens of similar standing. The Hardings do not "dress for dinner," nor have tea in the afternoon. Harding likes waffles for breakfast and a well done beefsteak for dinner. There is refinement at their table, but not "style" and no stranger would ever be embarrassed by a confusing array of forks and spoons. They live just like other Americans of moderate means. Mrs. Harding looks after her potted plants and the senator makes frequent rounds of inspection after breakfast or lunch to see that there are no loose boards on the back yard walk or to examine the screen door hinges that have been squeaking for several days.

One thing every visitor at Marion discovers the first thing—the Hardings are just what they are, as Mrs. Harding puts it.

Harding's closest friends have often expressed regret that the campaign photographs of the candidate showed a rather stern visage. They probably portray quite faithfully the features of Harding as he appears in the midst of an earnest speech. But there is another Harding which shows far more warmth sitting around the dinner table while political troubles are left outside for the moment. Then the genial, easy going good humored Harding holds sway. Pushing back his chair a little from the table, he will light one of his favorite long rough stogies and look reminiscent.

"Warren, why don't you tell them how you got fired from your first newspaper job," Mrs. Harding will say turning a twinkling eye on her guests.

And Warren rather reluctantly begins by saying "Oh, they would be none too in that."

Then he tells about his first job as a reporter on the old Marion Star, a zealous Democratic paper. That is, just fifteen, wrote up birth marriages, deaths, met all trains and did politics on the side. His boss, busy in politics, was out of town a cool deal and let Warren write the editorials warning him that the must be fervently Democratic in tone.

"You know some of the best editorials I ever wrote were for that Democratic paper," Harding says. But all the while he was an active Republican worker, though not old enough to vote. He wore one of the large Blaine campaign hats adopted by Republican partisans during that campaign. He got away with it for a while, but local Democrats began to complain to Harding's boss about him allowing a Republican to get out his paper. Then Harding made his first political decision. It was either discard the Blaine hat or be fired. He was fired.

"I have been a strong party man ever since," Harding adds.

Then you may hear Harding tell how he and a boy chum between them borrowed $300 and bought the Marion Star the sheriff had taken charge of the property. They printed it one page at a time on a small job press—and it was the first small town daily in Ohio, Harding says. But the partnership broke up when the telephone was introduced in Marion. Harding, who had to get all the advertising and collect news as well, wanted to put in a telephone to save time. His partner said it was a silly idea. Harding ordered it in anyway and the partner coming back to the office was so angry that he demanded dissolution of the partnership and insisted on being put on salary.

"I put him on the payroll at nine dollars a week," Harding said. "And he was better off than I was then."

But the young publisher struggled along, setting up his own type often writing all the news and soliciting most of the advertising. When the Star grew to need a circulation manager, Mrs. Harding dropped the housework and took the job. She went down to the Star office every day, kept the books of all subscribers, collected for the paper, hired the carriers and supervised the distribution of the paper from the time it came out of the press.

"In those days I knew every subscriber of the Star and I knew just how much he owed on his paper bill," Mrs. Harding said one day. She also had her troubles with the newsboys. One day a youngster ran a small electric wire a round the press to the rack where Mrs. Harding pulled out the papers.

When she put her hand down to take out a bunch she touched the live wire and got a shock.

She started on the trail of the offending youngster who had given her trouble before and having obtained his mother's proxy after an altercation some weeks before, promptly collared the young man and turned him over her knee and spanked him. A few Sundays ago five former newsboys of the Star, all now prosperous young men matter ed in many cities, came to Marion. They were gathered on the front porch with Senator and Mrs. Harding.

"Where is the boy Mrs. Harding spanked?" Senator Harding asked. Five hands went up in the crowd.

That is Mrs. Harding's way. She is frank, outspoken, and the most inveterate campaigner of the two. She appears to really enjoy shaking hands during a political affair and around her home here she is out from early morning until after dark greeting visitors.

Her good humored manner has made a hit with political audiences throughout the campaign. When Harding went to the Senate Mrs. Harding set up a home in Washington, but to the consternation of many of the ladies of the senate, she continued to invite her old friends in regardless of their social standing in the "senatorial circle." If she must true to form, anyone in Marion probably will be able to wander into the White House and get an invitation to stay for dinner.

Mrs. Harding has what they call "gumption" out here in Ohio. In her youth she was a skilled horsewoman, her father, who was a wealthy business man here, having owned a fine string of riding horses. Now she takes most of her recreation in the form of automobile riding. That is one reason Harding never travels on the train if good roads are available. Most of the trips to and from Washington are by motor and all trips in Ohio are by that method.

Harding played tennis years ago, but relies on golf for recreation now. Neither reads a great deal but the standard of the theatre and especially the more serious plays.

Harding has been primarily a newspaper publisher during his entire manhood, although he has carried on politics as a side line most of the time. Identified with the Ohio Republican machinery since he became a voter, Harding, however, has held office only a comparatively short time. He was in the state senate from 1899 to 1903, was lieutenant governor the next two years, ran for governor but was defeated, and went to the Senate in 1911. He rounds out his first term as U. S. senator March 4 next, just as he steps into the White House.

Harding was a political protégé of the late Senator Foraker, of Ohio and was allied with his faction for many years. But by a strange twist of fate, Harding ran against Foraker for the senatorial nomination in 1914 and won, ending the public career of the famous Ohio boss who had brought him up in the political world.

Harding has reputation throughout the country as being a second Mc Kinley. He himself has often said he saw little resemblance, yet close friends of both see a parallel in their tariff views and in their willingness to be guided by advice, and in some of their mannerisms. Both have grave countenances and probably no one ever shaped either on the back.

Under the Harding administration, it is likely that the "great man" theory of the president which has prevailed since Roosevelt's dominating personality reigned at the White

Reason for Program.
One of the churches has recently installed a motion picture machine. The Sunday service consists of an address by the pastor, followed by the pictures. Hot Cross Buns.
Eating hot cross buns on Good Friday is an old custom, dating back to the early centuries. All manner of superstition seems to attend the custom. One is that the eating of buns on Good Friday protects the house from fire. Another, that hot cross buns hung up in the kitchen will insure prosperity for the coming year. Hot cross buns baked on Good Friday and hung over the front door will ward off evil, is another.

FARMERS MAY GET TENANTS IF THEY DESIRE.

The farmers of Clearfield county who have been trying to obtain tenant farmers, during the last few years may be able to get this help before spring, if they still desire it.

The shortage of labor on the farms during the last few years, as well as the numerous times lying idle for want of tenants, caused a national problem and has been attacked in a nation wide manner.

An employment service in connection with the Immigration Bureau in Washington has been established in each state, with branch services at different points throughout the state. The one for our county is located at Altoona, and takes in the seven surrounding counties.

It is desired that all farmers in the county who are interested or want further information get in touch or write at once to: County Farm Agent, W. C. Stierck, Clearfield, Pa.

His Grievance.

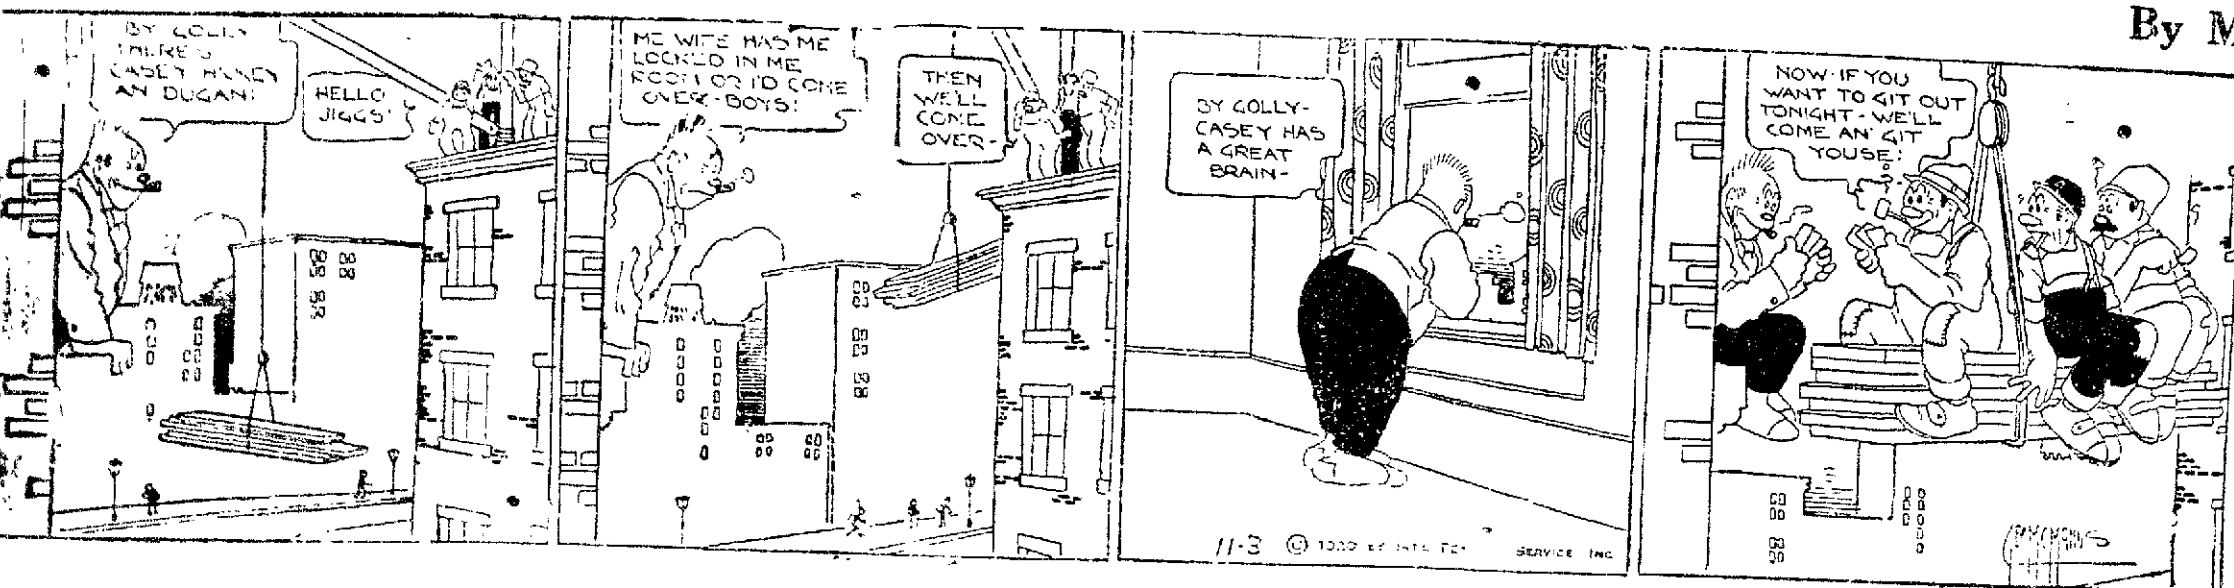

My small son was being dressed by his grandmother and after she had spoken to him several times about twisting around so much, she jerked him closer to her and said rather crossly: "If you want me to dress you, stand still." He said in a pouting tone: "Why, grandmother, you button me like you don't know me."—Chicago Tribune.

ed in many cities, came to Marion. They were gathered on the front porch with Senator and Mrs. Harding.

"Where is the boy Mrs. Harding spanked?" Senator Harding asked. Five hands went up in the crowd.

That is Mrs. Harding's way. She is frank, outspoken, and the most inveterate campaigner of the two. She appears to really enjoy shaking hands during a political affair and around her home here she is out from early morning until after dark greeting visitors.

Her good humored manner has made a hit with political audiences throughout the campaign.

When Harding went to the Senate in Washington, but to the consternation of many of the ladies of the senate, she continued to invite her old friends in the "senatorial circle." If she runs true to form, anyone in Marion probably will be able to wander into the White House and get an invitation to stay for dinner.

Mrs. Harding has what they call "gumption" out here in Ohio. In her youth she was a skilled horsewoman, her father, who was a wealthy business man here, having owned a fine string of riding horses. Now she takes most of her recreation in the form of automobile riding. That is one reason Harding never travels on the train if good roads are available. Most of the trips to and from Washington are by motor and all trips in Ohio are by that method.

Harding played tennis years ago, but relies on golf for recreation now. Neither reads a great deal but they are fond of the theatre and especially the more serious plays.

Harding has been primarily a newspaper publisher during his entire manhood, although he has carried on politics as a side line most of the time. Identified with the Ohio Republican machinery since he became a voter, Harding, however, has held office only a comparatively short time. He was in the state senate from 1899 to 1903, was lieutenant governor the next two years, ran for governor but was defeated, and went to the Senate in 1914. He rounds out his first term as U. S. senator March 4 next, just as he steps into the White House.

Harding was a political protégé of the late Senator Foraker, of Ohio and was allied with his faction for many years. But by a strange twist of fate, Harding ran against Foraker for the senatorial nomination in 1914 and won, ending the public career of the famous Ohio boss who had brought him up in the political world.

Harding has reputation throughout the country as being a second McKinley. He himself has often said he saw little resemblance, yet close friends of both see a parallel in their tariff views and in their willingness to be guided by advice, and in some of their mannerisms. Both have grave countenances and probably no one ever slapped either on the back.

Under the Harding administration, it is likely that the "great man" theory of the president which has prevailed since Roosevelt's dominating personality reigned at the White

Hot Cross Buns. Eating hot cross buns on Good Friday is an old custom, dating back to the early centuries. All manner of superstitions seem to be attached to the custom. One is that the eating of buns on Good Friday protects the house from fire. Another, that hot cross buns hung up in the kitchen will insure prosperity for the coming year. Hot cross buns baked on Good Friday and hung over the front door will ward off evil, is another.

RIGHT ON VERGE OF A COLLAPSE

Philadelphia Woman Had About Lost Her Strength Completely—Gains 20 Pounds

"Before taking Tanlac I was so weak and nervous at times I couldn't hold a broom to do a little sweeping, but the medicine has built me up about twenty pounds in weight and I am so strong now I can do my housework easily," said Mrs. Mary Kilpatrick, 1504 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, Pa., recently.

"I suffered a general break down several months ago following the terrible epidemic of influenza which visited Philadelphia. The loss of my daughter and my brother together with the hardships brought on by the epidemic seemed to take my strength completely.

"I had a nervous form of indigestion, and what little I ate did not seem to do me any good. I had terrible headaches and dizzy spells after eating and was so sick I could scarcely stay up. I got so nervous at times it seemed that I would go distracted, and I was on the verge of a general collapse.

"But it wasn't long after my husband heard about Tanlac and brought me a bottle before I noticed a big improvement in my condition. My appetite improved right away, and now my food tastes so well I want to be eating all the time, and my digestion is in the best of condition. I don't have headaches or dizzy spells and my nerves are calm and steady, and I sleep like a child every night and get up mornings feeling fine. All the credit and praise for my present good health are due Tanlac, and I expect to keep some of this grand medicine on hand all the time."

Tanlac is sold by all leading druggists.

AN OVERBURDENED WIFE
If the work that men do and the pains they suffer could be measured in figures, what a terrible array they would present! Through girlhood, wifehood and motherhood woman toils on, often suffering with headache, pains in side, headaches and nervousness which are tell-tale symptoms of organic derangements which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made from roots and herbs—can undoubtedly correct. Women who suffer should not give up hope until they have given it a trial.

Origin of Famous Quotations.
The henpecked man had just obtained a divorce from his first wife. He was heard to mutter, with the only Jewish glee that had been his since the orange blossom episode, "And the first shall be last."

END OF EIGHT YEARS MISERY

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Recovered.

Newark, N. J.—The doctor said I had an organic trouble and treated me for several weeks. At times I could not walk at all and I suffered with my back and limbs so I often had to stay in bed. I suffered on and on for eight years. Finally I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a good medicine and tried it with splendid effect. I can now do my housework and my washing. I have recommended your vegetable Compound and your Blood Medicine and three of my friends are taking them to advantage. You can use my name for a testimonial."

House, will disappear at least for the time.

Those closest to Harding, say he does not consider himself a powerful dominating figure in the sense that President Wilson or Theodore Roosevelt felt themselves. His big task in the next four years, as he is said to see it, is that of harmonizing the best brains of the country and focusing them on national problems. He feels deeply, his friends say, that there is a great crisis in world affairs which will continue until the league of nations question is settled. In that crisis, Harding expects to use the best minds of the country, as he puts it, in an effort to work out a solution which the entire nation will approve. He does not step into the presidency with the intention of making his will prevail in the nation's affairs beyond a certain point. His conception of the presidency is the reverse of President Wilson's, according to those who know him best. Harding believes that the office is largely an executive one and that Congress, not the president, is the channel through which public opinion should express itself. If this analysis made by his close friends is correct, Harding, as president, will be inclined to lay back and permit Congress to shape the nation's policies, using his own powers only to carry the expressed wishes of Congress into effect. This is his theory, but whether the difficulties of practical politics will permit him to carry it out, only time can show.

Those observers predict a rather stormy four years for Harding. Although he held his party together through the campaign, there is the possibility of rift within the organization over the league issue. If the tariff is not raised, there will be no opportunity for more trouble. Senator Harding, more than any one else, possibly, recognizes this situation and is determined that his big contribution to the present situation shall be an effort to harmonize divergent views and bring them together on a compromise course which will not lean to the extreme either way. Harding has an ability, which he often reveals to those close to him, at standing back and taking stock of himself. On these occasions the extreme simplicity of the man stands out. It is attributed in part to his simple early life.

His earliest sport was diving into the swimming pool at Caladonia where he moved as a small boy. About the time he got into long trousers he learned to play the cornet and joined the village band. Harding turned his horn playing to account in another way, too. Mrs. Harding, before she was married gave piano lessons to boys and girls in Marion. During their courtship Harding often brought his cornet over and played duets with the future Mrs. Harding at the piano.

They have no children and there are no pets around the Harding house at present. Both are fond of dogs and kept a big collie for years, but one day it mysteriously took ill and died. Since then they have had no dog. Mrs. Harding tells several stories about her husband's love of animals. When Warren was a small boy he had a little pug nosed pup that one day got in the way of a street car and lost a hind leg. Harding would not permit the animal to be killed and carried him over to his father's office. Doctor Harding finally yielded to the pleas of his boy and sewed up the stump of the dog's leg. After it had healed, young Harding whistled out a wooden leg for the pup and it hobbled around Marion for several years on the peg leg that Warren Harding had made.

Senator Harding is a Baptist and Mrs. Harding is a Methodist. Harding is an Elk and a member of the Masonic order. He smokes cigars and cigarettes, but prefers to dry smoke a long black stogie.

Harding is simple in his dress, wearing the conventional frock coat on when formal occasion demands it. At other times he wears an easy fitting two button sack coat. Harding never affects anything freakish in the way of string neckties or shaggy hair. His hair is always neatly trimmed and he wears torn down collars with nearly white cravats—purple being his favorite color.

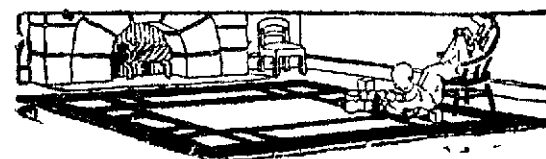

Optimistic Thought.

The state belongs to no man but every man belongs to the state.
